ZONING OVERVIEW | R6

The character of R6 districts can range from row house neighborhoods to large-scale "tower in the park" developments. The standard bulk regulations, or Height Factor Regulations, for R6 districts encourage small apartment buildings on small zoning lots and, on larger lots, tall, narrow buildings that are set back from the street. As an alternative, developers may choose the optional Quality Housing program regulations to build lower, high lot coverage buildings that reflect the traditional neighborhood streetscape.

Height Factor Regulations: Height factor buildings are often set back from the street and surrounded by open space and on-site parking. The floor area ratio in R6 districts ranges from 0.78 (for a single-story building) to 2.43 at a typical height of 13 stories; the open space ratio ranges from 27.5 to 37.5. A taller building can usually be obtained by providing more open space. For example, 81% of the zoning lot with a 13-story building is required to be open space (2.43 FAR x 33.5 OSR). Thus, the maximum floor area ratio is achievable only where the zoning lot is large enough to accommodate a practical building footprint as well as the required amount of open space. The building must be set within a sky exposure plane which, in R6 districts, begins at a height of 60 feet above the front lot line and then slopes inward over the zoning lot. Off-street parking is required for 70% of a building's dwelling units, or it can be waived if five or fewer spaces are required.
